Lucas Limon

A Health Advisory has been issued by the District of Columbia Department of Health regarding Lucas Limon, a product marketed as food seasoning but eaten by children as candy. This product contains unsafe levels of lead and should be kept out of the hands of children.

Lucas Limon

Candy Maker

Mars, Inc. subsidiary Effern Mexico, Santa Catarina, Mexico

Key Ingredients

Salt, citric acid, natural lemon

Description

All the Lucas powdered candies are a variation on a successful blend of spicy and sweet seasonings. Kids shake them onto fruit, chips, and ice cream. Some children pour the powdered candy into their mouths in a practice called “waterfalling”.

Important Health Information

Lead is a heavy metal that can poison children even in small amounts. Children who are exposed to lead may suffer life-long learning problems and a lower IQ.
